

Forest Fires Reap Heavy Toll

Estimate Over 30,000 Acres Burned. Fires Now Under Control.

What are believed to have been the most destructive forest fires in Michigan, began raging last night over a large part of the state. The fires were reported in several places where they were burning. In the area burned near Fredonia, the flames swept over the hills and burned the forest. The State Department of Conservation estimates that from ten to twenty thousand acres of forest have been destroyed. The fires were reported in several places where they were burning. HATS OFF to our citizens and the CCC boys for the way they responded to the calls to fight fire. A hot job, little pay, and little rest didn't dim their loyalty to the emergency call. Gratitude on the part of the people of Grayling and Crawford county is due each and every one of these helpers. And we are grateful; thanks, fellows.

MORE ABOUT RAINBOWS

In our issue of August 3 we published an editorial with the following caption: "Where Are The Rainbows?" In it we were pleased to quote Carl Mickelson of Mason who lays the scarcity of rainbows in the AuSable river to the presence of large dams built and operated by the Consumers Power Co. and he advocated the use of fish ladders.

Editor Al Weber of the Cheboygan Observer isn't quite satisfied with Mr. Mickelson's idea that his plan would fill the river with rainbow trout, and tells about an expensive fish ladder placed in the Cheboygan river and says "we don't believe there was ever a game fish of any kind climbed that ladder from the lower to the upper river."

While we hold quite high regard for Mr. Weber's opinions, especially as it pertains to fish and wild life, still we are of the opinion that Mr. Mickelson was right in his theory. Pan fish, or what are called by many, "course fish," such as are found in the Cheboygan river are no such fish as a rainbow trout. When the rainbow wants to get somewhere he just goes and it takes quite a barricade to stop him. We still believe that rainbows, if given a chance, would continue to come up the AuSable river from Lake Huron every spring to spawn. At least we believe it would be worth every cent it would cost for someone to devise a method for getting these gamey fish over the five dams that now block their progress upstream.

Guides, scouts and those who have lived near the AuSable river since the days of the grayling fish and have seen them disappear, and now have witnessed the rapid decline of the rainbows, with whom we have discussed the matter, are all of the opinion that the power dams are rapidly killing the rainbow fishing in this famous old trout stream.

Twenty-three or four years ago and before that each year, according to statements made to this writer, the rainbows would come out of Lake Huron early in April and swim up the AuSable in great schools. Some of the people living close to the river say they were so plentiful that at times they could even hear them in their mad rushes upstream at night, and at times hundreds of dorsal fins could be seen sticking out of the water as lights were flashed across the stream. They would travel upstream until spawning time. After that period they would leisurely return to the big waters (Lake Huron). They would spend the larger part of the summer getting back. And millions would not return at all. After a brief period in Lake Huron the rainbows would again make the trip upstream and return to the big water to remain during the winter months. Then early in springtime the upstream pilgrimage would be renewed for the spawning period.

This information relative to the habits of rainbow trout in the AuSable river about a quarter century ago was gathered from men who have spent the greater part of their lives on the AuSable river and there is little difference in the theories of any of them.

The first power dam, known as the "Cook dam," was finished in about the year 1911. Others came later until now there are five of such dams. That they are the cause of the decrease of rainbow trout in the AuSable seems quite conclusive.

The State Department of Conservation annually plants millions of rainbow trout in the AuSable. What becomes of them? Do they follow the down-stream trail as is their nature? It is the opinion of many here that they do. They go over the spillways of the big dams and possibly thru some of the tunnels, possibly to be killed or perhaps to reach the stream below in safety. But it is quite inevitable that they are never able to return as nature prompts them to do. And we are convinced that this is the reason why we haven't better rainbow fishing in the AuSable. They're not there. Once they reach the big waters of Lake Huron they are unable to return. This condition has developed since the advent of the power dams that obstruct this formerly wonderful rainbow stream. The same condition exists in the Big Manistee, that was once the home of the rainbow where five pounders were not uncommon. They're not there today, because, we are convinced, of the power dams on that fine river. A comparison of these two great streams with others such as the Muskegon, Pere Marquette and others where there are no power dams to keep the rainbows from coming out of Lake Michigan annually where rainbow fishing is still excellent, is quite conclusive proof of the claim that the power dams are the cause for the scarcity of these fish in the AuSable and Big Manistee rivers.

Every effort should be made to correct this damage to these streams, and any remedy that has a fair chance for success should be made, no matter what the cost may be. These rivers are great assets to Michigan and are worth all it may cost. If successful fish ladders can be constructed, fine! If that is not the remedy, then another should be worked out. We have every reason to believe that it can be done successfully.

THOSE WHO TEACH

Our public school teachers are facing a serious situation. With living costs rapidly advancing they are being compelled to accept salary reductions, which in many instances are far below that which the spirit of NIRA intended. This is true the country over.

Not only are these salary reductions mandatory, but teachers are also liable to dismissal at any time by school authorities. Many thousands have already lost their jobs. Unless some intelligent consideration is given the matter chaos in our public school system will result.

We cannot hope to reduce wages of teachers to starvation levels and expect to continue our former high standards of education. Is there not some way of reducing our public school costs without inflicting too great a penalty upon those who teach the young?

BROWN FUNERAL LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral services of Peter L. Brown were held last Friday afternoon, with services at the home at 1:30, and at the Michelson Memorial Church at 2:00. Rev. H. J. Salmon officiated at the services and Mrs. C. G. Clippert and her father Mr. Edward Webb, sang several selections.

Members of the Masonic lodge acted as pallbearers and were: M. A. Bates, Lars Nelson, Jappe Smith, E. G. Clark, Charles Fehr, and Frank Ahman. Mr. Brown was laid to rest with full Masonic honors in Elmwood cemetery.

Those from out of town attending the funeral were Otto Brown of Middleton, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Bert Scholz of Saginaw; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Strehl of East Jordan; Mrs. Loyl Cameron and son Robert, Grand Rapids; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brown, Bay City; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Trudo, Midland; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Brown and two daughters, of Oakland, Calif., and Emerson Brown, of Ann Arbor.

CARD OF THANKS

We extend our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends of Beaver Creek and to Grayling people for their many kindnesses and beautiful expressions of sympathy during our late bereavement. We also appreciate very much the kindness of Fr. Culligan. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Miller.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our kind friends and neighbors, Rev. Salmon, and members of the Masonic lodge for their kindness in our recent sorrow.

Mrs. Peter L. Brown and Family.

Chicago Once Coral Reef

Chicago, known to the world as the windy city, was once a "South Sea paradise," but that was 400,000,000 years ago at least. This is the claim which is advanced by the Field Museum of Natural History in an article in its bulletin, which describes Chicago's site as once having been a coral reef, submerged under the water of a great interior sea.

Baseball

Grayling vs. Gaylord

Johnson pitched for Grayling and held Gaylord hitless for eight innings, when Hutchinson by accident doubled to left, which was the only hit they were able to secure off Johnson. While Grayling gathered eleven bingles, Hutchinson was pounded off the slab in the sixth inning and replaced by Noss. The score was 7-1 in favor of Grayling.

Grayling vs. West Branch

The game was called Saturday with Dyer in the box for Grayling. He was relieved in the latter part of the game by Woodburn. Dyer had good support throughout the game. Score—West Branch 1, and Grayling 5.

In the Primary election the following republicans were nominated for county offices on the Republican ticket: Sheriff, Homer G. Benedict with a majority of 55; county clerk, J. J. Neiderer, majority 18; county treasurer, E. S. Houghton (no opposition); registrar of deeds, A. B. Failing, majority 7; prosecuting attorney, F. G. Walton, majority over 0.

Palmer 58; other offices with no opposition circuit court commissioners, O. Palmer; coroners, S. N. Insley, J. A. Leighton; surveyor, E. P. Richardson. Returns for democratic offices show that S. S. Phelps was nominated for the office of county clerk, and was the only candidate for county office by the democrats.

Bird Language

Authorities agree that birds and fowls have a language system of their own. Close study seems to indicate that. Although much that we hear may not be important, certain jibberings, such as when a hen calls her chicks from danger, is an example of the use of their language. Definite calls, songs, or cooing during the mating season is another clear indication.

The Machine Man

By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

At commencement in one of our American colleges an alumnus of large wealth returned to help celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of his class. Among those he met was a classmate whose exceptional ability won him a place on the faculty of the college. Upon seeing this professor, who for many years had been teaching Greek, the rich alumnus remarked, "And are you still teaching Greek?" The implication being that the time devoted to that task, a rather impractical one at best, could have been otherwise devoted to a more successful career. The Greek professor thought for a moment, and then replied, "No, I have spent some time teaching young men and women, but I begin with Greek."

In a charity hospital an examination took place in the presence of nurses and internes. The head physician addressed a young girl in a way which caused one of the internes who could stand the inhuman method of his superior no longer, to exclaim: "See here, are you talking to a dog or a human being?" The most interesting thing about this experience was not only the nerve of the young interne, but the absolute surprise of the chief of staff. It was a surprise to him that he had been violating any law of common ethics.

An official in a large corporation recently remarked to the writer: "We are looking for a machine in the form of a man to do a certain piece of work."

Much has been written lately in criticism of the machine age. Among the arguments advanced were that the age of machinery has displaced manual labor. Today many a machine displaces from ten to twenty-five men. These men, thrown out of employment, must find work elsewhere, which greatly aggravates the labor problem. Another argument has been that the constant attendance upon a machine enhances the dangers incident to a monotonous and routine type of work, thus destroying all initiative.

One very just criticism, which has received very little attention, is the effect upon the man who owns the machine. Is it not true that men are more and more becoming like the machines they control? An indifferent, almost callous attitude toward the human element is a factor which may seriously retard the development of our economic recovery. May this danger be overcome before it is too late.

WRECKED ONE DAY PAID FOR THE NEXT

When the Floral Hall on the fair grounds at St. Johns, Michigan, was completely destroyed by a cyclone Sunday afternoon, July 23rd, this big company sent adjusters there the next day and settlement was made at once, a check being mailed to the insured Tuesday morning from the home office of the company. Above is a picture of the wrecked building.

This company has an enviable reputation for equitable adjustment and prompt settlement of all just claims, over a period of nearly a half century.

This has been a year of severe windstorms and many heavy losses have already occurred.

The cost of windstorm insurance is so low in this company because of its great size, and its experienced business management, that no property owner can afford to be without adequate windstorm protection.

Wallace Asks 15 Per Cent Wheat Acreage Reduction—
NRA Campaign Among Consumers—Raymond Moley's Resignation—Washington for Repeal.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEAT farmers of the nation, in order to receive federal cash benefits under the domestic allotment plan, must agree to reduce their 1934 wheat acreage by 15 per cent. This was the announcement made by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, after the news of the international wheat agreement reached in the London conference was received. The secretary estimated that this reduction will mean a cut of about 9,600,000 acres in wheat plantings and of more than 124,000,000 bushels in the 1934 wheat crop, provided all the farmers sign up. They were being strongly urged to do in appeals that were broadcast throughout the wheat belt.

Under the allotment plan, the machinery of which is now completed, the government will pay the farmer 28 cents per bushel on 54 per cent of his crop, or that portion destined for consumption in this country. In return the farmer must agree to cut his 1934 wheat plantings by 15 per cent. Some $120,000,000 in compensating payments is expected to be paid this year. If all wheat farmers sign government contracts promising to reduce their next year's planting by the stipulated amount, funds for the payments are expected to be raised by a 30-cent-a-bushel processing tax on the flour millers.

The application each farmer signs obligates him to sign a contract with Secretary Wallace when his application is approved in Washington. It must be accompanied by a map of his farm, showing location of all buildings, his crop system, and legal description of his location. It must also have a signed statement of the farmer as to how much wheat came off the farm in the last three years and a certificate of the elevator or railroad official who bought the wheat.

"BUY under the blue eagle," was the slogan with which Administrator Hugh Johnson opened the great drive to persuade the entire nation to give its full support to the NRA. The cry was taken up by an army of a million and a half volunteers who started out to canvass the households of the country, to tell the people what the recovery act means and to enlist the individual citizens under its emblem.

General Johnson warned the people that "even a shadow" of boycott, intimidation and violence would wreck the whole endeavor; but he insisted that confining one's patronage to dealers who fly the blue eagle would not be boycotting the others and would be not only justifiable but necessary to the campaign's success.

Completion of the automobile code and its acceptance by President Roosevelt was counted a great achievement by NRA, and the manufacturers were fairly well satisfied with the compromise on the union labor problem which gave them the right to deal with their workers on a basis of merit and efficiency. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor was quick to take advantage of the provision of the code which, he held, permits the workers to organize. He wired the general organizer, William Collins, in Detroit to appeal to auto employees to "unite with labor." Pessimistic observers see in all this the seeds of future conflicts.

Henry Ford was still silent on his intentions concerning the code. General Johnson said emphatically that if he did not sign he could not get the blue eagle; that outdoing the code with shorter hours and higher wages would not be compliance.

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN, who as federal co-ordinator of transportation has perhaps the hardest job in the administration, is promoting a freight car equipment program, believing this would be a great contribution toward the increasing employment—as it undoubtedly would. He has asked the executives of class I railroads to make a thorough canvass of existing freight car equipment and to submit at the earliest practicable date their views as to the repair or retirement of worn-out and obsolete cars.

The railroads are asked to submit their recommendations for repairs and retirements of each year up to and including 1938 with the average cost for each car.

Mr. Eastman wants the railroads to retire and destroy or rehabilitate the thousands of cars whose period of service has expired. He also asks them to consider the voluntary restriction to service on their own lines of cars of light construction and cars of larger capacity that are not good for more than two and a half years of further service.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT selected Secretary of the Interior Ickes to be administrator for the oil industry, and then selected the other 14 members of the planning and conservation committee to assist Mr. Ickes in this work.

The President also took steps to relax the gold embargo for the benefit of the mine owners. He issued two orders, one allowing the sale in foreign markets of gold mined in the United States and the other stringently binding the anti-hoarding regulations to safeguard the national supply.

He made sure that this permission to give gold producers the advantage of the higher prices available abroad would also be shared by the refiners, and his two orders made this possible.

Then Mr. Roosevelt cleaned up his desk and began a week-end vacation. He attended the Dutchess county fair at Rhinebeck, and next day embarked on Vincent Astor's yacht for a cruise that was to last until after Labor day.

RAYMOND MOLEY, regarded as the "ace" of the Roosevelt brain trust, is no longer assistant secretary of state or in any other way connected with the administration. Following a call at the summer White House in Hyde Park, Professor Moley announced his resignation and his plans to become the editor of a new weekly magazine to be established by Vincent Astor. His associates will be W. Averell Harriman and V. V. McNitt. The publication will be devoted to controversial articles concerning politics and economics and Moley said one of its purposes will be to interpret the ideas of the Roosevelt administration, though it will not be in any sense an agent of the NRA.

Both Professor Moley and Secretary of State Hull denied that the former's resignation was caused by the disagreements between those two gentlemen which culminated at the London conference. Many independent commentators held that Moley's retirement from the administration heralded the passing of the regime of the professor and the return of practical politicians to the direction of the nation's affairs.

REPEALISTS were unnecessarily worried about the state of Washington, partly because the vote on wiping out the Eighteenth amendment was in the form of referendums in each of the legislative districts. This scheme, however, availed the drys nothing, for the state voted for repeal about 5 to 2. Nearly complete returns showed that only one district, with two delegates, went dry, so the repeal amendment will be ratified by the other 97 delegates when the convention meets October 3 in Olympia.

The state emergency committee, a retentionist organization, fought repeal. It contended that in the event of abolition of the prohibition amendment the state would be without liquor regulation, except laws prohibiting sale of alcoholic beverages to Indians and minors, until the legislature meets again in 1935. The state bone-dry law, passed in 1917, was repealed last November.

SENATOR HUBY LONG of Louisiana attained the front page again twice. First, at a charity party at the Sands Point Bath club on Long Island, he gave deep affront to an unnamed gentleman and in turn received a black eye.

His explanation, quite incredible, was that he was "ganged" by enemies. Thence he hurried to Milwaukee to address the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and he opened his speech with a virulent attack on the press reporters present because they sought the truth about the former incident. For this the officers of the organization publicly apologized. It remains for them to explain why they ever invited the "Kingfish" to address them. He is neither a statesman nor an economist, and, in view of political conditions in Louisiana, the fact that he is a senator confers no distinction on him.

TEA and conversation were all that Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, obtained when he visited President Roosevelt at Hyde Park. He was accompanied by George L. Harrison, governor of the New York federal reserve bank, and he hoped to talk about stabilization of the currency. But there were various other guests present, and still more dropped in during the afternoon—and Mr. Roosevelt had no desire to talk about stabilization or any allied matters. So it was just a pleasant social affair, and Mr. Norman left early.

The eminent Londoner, however, did have a number of conferences with financial men, including Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, and monetary problems were discussed, but the results, if any, were not made public.

EUROPE is not feeling at all peaceful these days, and this is due largely to the doings of German Chancellor Hitler and his Nazis in their conflict with the government of Austria. The Austrian Nazis are hurrying across the border to join their comrades in Germany, and the threat of invasion grows day by day. But if it comes, the invaders will be met at the frontier by a vastly increased Austrian army. Among other steps by the Vienna government is the decreeing of a new short-term enlistment force in which from 16,000 to 20,000 men will be trained annually and a second army created.

President Von Hindenburg and Hitler attended a huge meeting of Germans at Tannenberg to celebrate the German victory there over the Russians, and the former, accepting as a gift from East Prussia a forest estate, said: "I am thinking with reverence, fidelity and gratitude of my kaiser, the king and lord, in this hour, when I am thinking also of my deceased comrades in arms, and when I proceed to thank you for the gift."

The chancellor, flying the same day to Niederwald, near the Saar frontier, told a crowd of 200,000 that Germany would never give up the Saar. At the time of the latter demonstration there was a secret meeting of Nazi chieftains to whom Saar State Councillor Simon said: "Wherever the German language is spoken, wherever German blood runs in the veins, greater Germany extends. We will not be content just with the Saar. The German language is spoken as far west as Metz and Mulhouse. The Saar, Alsace, Lorraine and parts of Belgium and Holland formerly were German and the German character still lives there today in the people."

"Germany will no longer be a people of 60,000,000 inhabitants, but of 90,000,000. The conquest of the Saar will be the point of departure for other political successes on the western frontiers of Germany. The Nazi, the reich and Chancellor Hitler will not rest until this aim—a Germany of 90,000,000 inhabitants—has been achieved."

UNCLE SAM is determined to bring Samuel Insull back home to answer for his alleged sins. At the request of American government agents the Greek authorities again arrested the former utilities magnate, and the appeals court in Athens sustained this action and rejected Insull's plea for release on bail.

The fugitive from Chicago will have to spend another month under restraint pending the result of the second effort to extradite him, but, being in poor health, he is kept under guard in a clinic.

Insull's lawyers indicated that he will first seek to have himself made a Greek citizen, and, failing this, will attempt to show that the extradition treaty between the United States and Greece is contrary to the provisions of the Greek constitution. He is now accused of violating the American bankruptcy law.

The extradition proceedings may be long drawn out. Insull can only be extradited if the charge against him is an offense against Greek as well as American law. Lawyers in Athens say that violation of the bankruptcy law is a much milder offense under Greek law than embezzlement and larceny, with which Insull was charged in the earlier proceedings.

ed and to co-operate in the battle against bandits. The police and the public do not need to become aroused. They are aroused and have been in that condition for some time. It is the courts that must become aroused. Parole boards need to become aroused. Lawyers need to become aroused, so aroused that they will remove some of the barriers to justice; barriers erected by vicious lawyers who prostitute their knowledge of the law to protect criminals.

The cause of law and order has been done more damage by the prison parole mill now in operation than can be repaired by a dozen resolutions passed by the attorney generals. When the public sees murderers, bandits and other criminals turned loose to again prey upon society it is any wonder that honest citizens are aroused? Why is it so strange that the public is disgusted? Crime will not be outlawed by resolutions. The changing of prison buildings back into prisons instead of health resorts, an iron-clad rule that 10 years in prison means 10 years instead of two or three years, police forces authorized to shoot before the gangster draws his gun, courts courageous enough to override legal technicalities raised by clever defense lawyers, and common, ordinary "guts" all up and down the line will stamp out bandits and banditry. Resolutions won't do the trick.—Ingham County News, Mason.

After reading accounts of the testimony given by Senator Couzens and Rev. Father Goughlin and some others that preceded them on the stand before the Detroit bank closing investigation, it is refreshing, encouraging and enlightening to read the testimony given by Senator Arthur Vandenberg. The Senator did not seek the spotlight. His testimony was not bombastic, or was it evasive or, I told you so. It rang honest and true and farther proved the kind of a man Michigan is privileged to have in the Senate at Washington.—Cheboygan Observer.

Health Teaching Is Called Major School Objective

PARENTS MUST HELP, SAYS N. Y. STATE SUPERVISOR OF HEALTH TEACHING

"Health teaching is as much a part of the school's field as any other kind of teaching," says Mary G. McCormick, of the New York State Department of Education. This authority thus lays down a rule that should be taken to heart by the educational systems all over the country.

In an interview, Miss McCormick pointed out that the responsibility of health teaching does not rest wholly upon the teachers. Parents must also help, she says. In this field, parents have a special opportunity to aid in bringing up strong, healthy children.

How can they help?
"They must learn the fundamentals of good health for themselves and practice them in the home," says Miss McCormick. "Healthy homes produce healthy children, not so much because of heredity as because there the practices which lead to health, such as proper eating, plenty of rest, tranquility and cleanliness become part of the child's habits automatically."

"For the same reason, unhealthy homes tend to produce children with health defects. The child of such a home imitates the bad health habits of his parents."

In a series of articles soon to appear in this paper, Miss McCormick will outline the fundamental rules of good health. Every parent and every teacher should follow this series carefully.

Chinese Early Paper-Makers
Genuine paper was made by the Chinese from very early times. It was probably brought into Europe during the Twelfth century through the Moors. About 1150 a paper mill was established at Fabriano, in Italy. The manufacture spread to France, Germany and England. In 1690 the first paper mill in America was built by William Rittenhouse at Roxborough, near Philadelphia.

Decline in Suicides
By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

In one of the leading financial journals recently appeared an article entitled:

"Suicides Decline as Trade Improves" the suggestion being that because of the improved economic condition men found it unnecessary to resort to suicide in order to end their troubles. Insurance companies in 1922-33 paid unprecedented large sums to families because of the suicide of a holder of a policy in which the members of the family were the beneficiaries. Some persons argued that suicide was not an act of cowardice, but on the contrary was indicative of a certain strength of character which provided the family with all necessary income.

It seems strange that in a country which offers so much of freedom, opportunity and advantage that the lamp of courage could burn so low that the only refuge was in self-destruction. Perhaps one explanation for suicide can be found in the lack of reverence for home and all that it should mean to a head of a family. If the home has lost its charm and the only place assigned to the head of the family is that of a bread winner, naturally he will find little to support him in his strenuous efforts to provide extravagant luxuries. On the other hand, doubtless many a discouraged man found great strength and an urge to fight the battle through because those dependent upon him were helping in sacrificing the unnecessary things in life and were content with a reduced income. Many families were thus kept intact and brought nearer to one another because they mutually shared a common burden and helped to solve it.

The question naturally arises, have we profited from this depression? Have we learned anything that will make life more livable and more worth while? As we look back upon the suffering of the last three years, one fact must impress itself upon every thinking person—that many things in life are far more valuable than money, and that many of the dearest things cannot be bought with money. The permanent ideals upon which every civilization must rest are frankly not for sale. They must be treasured, and when acquired safely guarded against the wiles of that crass materialism which argues that trade improvement justifies the decline in suicides.

DESCRIBES FARM ADJUSTMENT PLAN

Agricultural College President Says Federal Program Seeks to Adjust Output with Reduced Exports

The Federal farm adjustment program is partly guided by the belief that export of agricultural commodities will not soon recover its volume of five or ten years ago, in the opinion of F. D. Farrell, President Kansas Agricultural College, writing in the August issue of the American Bankers Association Journal.

"Nobody knows whether the farm adjustment program will succeed," writes Mr. Farrell. "Its sponsors describe it frankly as an experiment. It seeks to socialize agriculture at least to the extent that farmers, in what is believed to be the public interest, will restrain their production activities and that processors, distributors and consumers will contribute something toward paying farmers for exercising this restraint. The adjustment programs definitely are based on the fact that prices are determined primarily by supply and demand. They also are based on the assumption that the export business in agricultural commodities will not soon return to its volume of five or ten years ago."

Dependence on Public Support
"The plan offers wheat price insurance for 1933, 1934 and 1935, for the domestically consumed portion of the wheat crop. The insured price is to be sufficiently high to give the domestically consumed portion of the wheat crop pre-war purchasing power. If the plan is as effective as its sponsors hope it will be, the reduction in supply may influence wheat prices so that the entire wheat crop will have pre-war purchasing power."

"If the adjustment program succeeds, its launching probably will mark the end of an era of extreme individualism in agriculture in the United States," says Mr. Farrell.

"Recent fundamental changes led Secretary Wallace to say, 'What we really have to do is to change the whole psychology of the people of the United States.' This is a large order. It involves the whole program of farm adjustment as well as the larger national economic program, of which farm adjustment is a part. If the people decline to participate in the program to the extent necessary to give the experiment a fair trial, we shall never know whether farm adjustment as now proposed would have succeeded or not if it had been given a fair trial."

BANKERS PREPARE FARM FINANCE BOOK

Tells Bankers and Farmers What to Consider in Making Sound Loan.

A book on "Making Farm Investments Safe" has been prepared by the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association, summarizing material published by it during the past ten years. It presents a compilation of scientific facts, practice and experience in farming, with timely and helpful suggestions to serve as a reference and guide in the daily routine of banking and farming. From it practical workers in these fields can obtain an idea as to what extent and in what manner farm loans should be limited by soil erosion, weeds, plant diseases, rodents and fire hazards.

The book also indicates how much is added to the security of a farm loan by the farmer who keeps accounts and practices good business methods, as well as the extent to which loans are safeguarded by crop rotation, production of legumes, judicious use of commercial fertilizers, the use of quality seed and the providing of home grown feeds.

Another section sets forth the precautions that should be exercised by both the banker and farmer when negotiating loans to increase or improve dairy production, or beef, sheep, swine or poultry production, as well as what factors should be considered in the economic marketing of products and the way efficiency in production affects efficiency in marketing. Many other everyday details of farm life that have a practical financial significance are treated in the book.

Banks Repay K. F. C. Loans

Among the loans of $2,819,000,000 made by the Federal Government through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the highest percentage of repayments, official reports show, has been made by the banks, indicating the return of stability as the chief unsettling element of public fear has been lifted from them.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has authorized cash advances, fully secured by sound collateral, to 6,278 banks since it began operations in February, 1932, and made actual disbursements to them in the amount of $1,221,378,000. Of this amount, however, $545,073,000, or over 44 per cent, has been repaid by the banks. All other classes of borrowers combined have repaid about 16 per cent of their loans.

Inauguration Day on Sunday

Inauguration day has fallen on Sunday only four times since that date was fixed. It was Sunday for President Taylor in 1849, for President Hayes in 1877, for President Monroe in 1821, and for President Wilson in 1917. Had March 4 been retained for inaugurations, the next time it would have fallen on Sunday would have been 1945.
